The novel opens with Aunt Polly rescuing the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's mischievous and love she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. His clothes are still scruffy, but not as bad as they used to be. He has been out all morning and evening and has not been skipped school that day. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house in a sulk. He feels he has been neglected. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he sees a runaway horse, which is attended to by a young man. Tom and the young man are shipwrecked and rescued.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get his to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white ally," a kind of marble. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at suppertime, and Aunt Polly is satisfied. She tells him that he has made all the mischief for two weeks. Tom tells her he has been skipped school that afternoon and went swimming with his friends. His clothes are still wet from the river. Aunt Polly is satisfied with Tom’s story and allows him to go out for a stroll.

Tom goes out of the house in his new clothes, whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets a new arrival in town, who has just moved into the new house. Tom notices the newcomers and eventually chases the newcomers all the way home.
